Scope of the travel insurance policy

Attention should be paid not only to such obvious aspects as the scope of insurance policy (e.g. TPL, medical costs, PAI) or insurance amount. The best deals, such as eSky travel insurance, are tailored to the needs of travelers. Currently, this insurance provides among others:

- Covering the costs of treating exacerbation of a chronic condition,
- Covering the costs of maritime and mountain rescue operations,
- Covering the costs of medical transport and transport of dead bodies,
- Medical assistance,
- Home insurance for the time of departure,
- ATM cash withdrawal insurance while traveling,
- Compensation in the event of a flight delay or cancellation,
- Payment of compensation in the event of damage or loss of luggage,
- Reimbursement of costs incurred for the rental of equipment and the purchase of passes (in the event of closure of ski slopes).

Exclusions of travel insurance coverage

Before buying a travel insurance policy, it is worth checking in what situations it will provide coverage. Some insurance companies exclude coverage for people under the influence of alcohol. The eSky insurance provides you with the alcohol clause. Thanks to it, the insured person is protected by personal accident insurance and medical costs, regardless of the consumption of alcoholic beverages (the clause does not apply to third party liability insurance). The eSky travel insurance also covers when intellectual work during a trip is performed (e.g. during the so-called workation) as well as amateur sports.
